The undirected black edges which are meant to be seen as going from right to left represent dependencies in the subtasks of each user story. The frontend elements such as the buttons in the recruiter dashboard required all the backend methods and routes to be implemented, so the backend was prioritized. All the documentation (i.e CRC) was completed after the frontend and backend elements were completed. The group made sure to complete all the backend methods and routes that were dependencies for frontend elements by merging the corresponding branches onto the dev branch.
